In save the adventure of robozou. Robozou English V1.6 Save Daniel Smith, a hard-working Winnipeg businessman, was watching the Olympics on television on Friday when he struck a chord. "I feel like my country is being led by an out-of-touch reality star," he said. Smith, a member of the National Research Council and the Winnipeg Free Press, is referring to the president of the United States, Donald Trump. After a week of only watching CBC News in his Winnipeg business, Smith said he felt compelled to write to the director-general of CBC News to say he was terribly disappointed in the network and its president, Heather Conway. "They can't continue to be so far behind the curve in covering this," Smith said. He was referring to the reporting of the NFL and the fact the Canadian Football League, the Winnipeg Blue Bombers and the country's other CFL teams, are all off the hook for the 11-day break before the start of the regular season. That's meant players are preparing for 15 days in advance. If the Bombers were in the playoffs right now, they'd be preparing for the first game of the post-season. The CFL is the only major sport in North America that doesn't play a season that's continuous. Sure, the NFL and NHL do but every year of the National Basketball Association and Major League Baseball is continuous and competitive. A commentator from British Columbia, a university professor and a former Prime Minister turned politician all gave their take on the amateurish reporting of Trump's team and the wider RNC and to some degree Trump himself on the same night. 'Watch what you wish for' Peter MacIntyre, a professor emeritus in political science at the University of British Columbia, said he's noticed "a bit of a softening" on the part of Trump's campaign and the RNC. "But maybe I'm in the minority of Canadians who have noticed that Trump is doing better," MacIntyre said. "It may be that they're looking at what they want to see. After all, they're winning big-time in the polls." Steve Simmons, a commentator from Brampton, Ont., has read some of the negative comments made about Trump by politicians. He said he agrees some of the negative comments are a bit over-the-top but he also noticed a hardening of Trump supporters on f678ea9f9e
